

F ¶ This number marks the end of a period of more-or-less forced experimentation for me. When I left my last steady job I had on hand a supply of odd lots of paper in a variety of sizes. I decided to try not to buy any paper at all until this stock was used up. So, most of the time, I had to fit poems and printing concepts into those sheets, adapting and varying my masthead format as necessary. In the process, I often rediscovered how nice it is to work with a larger sheet and a poem I really love. It was very nice! ¶ Reflecting on all this, I've decided that you'll see somewhat less of my work in future bundles, but I hope it will be better, more consistent work. Besides, I need some time to learn to run my new computer, and peripherals will eat up my budget. . .
